Commercial Real Estate and Personal Property Valuation Services

As the FDIC prepares for the closure of a failing financial institution (Pre-Failure), marketing efforts to locate an appropriate purchaser are initiated. As a part of this process, the FDIC offers potential acquiring institutions an opportunity to purchase the failing institution's Bank Premises based on the current market value. After a bank failure (Post-Failure), the FDIC, acting in its capacity as Receiver for failed financial institutions, acquires assets not sold to the Assuming Institution which may include, but are not limited to, real estate, personal property, real estate loan collateral, and other types of assets. The acquired assets must be disposed of in an orderly and expeditious fashion. The FDIC's disposition process includes an analysis of each property's ownership interest and value.

Value estimates for these assets must be reasonably supported and documented. In an attempt to maintain public trust, the FDIC obtains appraisals and other valuation products based on state and federal guidelines and laws that apply to the banking industry. This ensures the value estimates

Credit Card Consulting Services

DRR requires the services of third-party contractors with defined skill sets such as program management, marketing and sales expertise, operations and accounting, and technical and coordination support services. The use of a contractor is deemed an appropriate and effective vehicle to support DRR in its resolution activity when credit card portfolios are part of the failed institution. A credit card portfolio may be found in a monoline institution, or the credit card business may be a division, department, or held by a subsidiary of the failing or failed financial institution. The credit card portfolio may include two (2) major types of activities; that of a credit card issuer (including debit card, gift card, travel card, reward program, and other programs) or a merchant card acquirer.

Cryptocurrency

Services under this contract may include accounting for cryptocurrencies, otherwise known as “cryptoassets” owned by the FDIC at a later time. The RBOA will expedite and streamline the procurement process by establishing upfront all general terms and conditions along with an experienced team of CS personnel. As a result of the decision by The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) permitting national banks' and federal savings associations' authority to provide cryptoasset custody services for customers, cryptoassets will become part of the assets retained by FDIC-R for post-closing liquidation. However, closing activity and the assets/liabilities involved for the future is unpredictable both as to timing and volume.

Nationwide Title Services

In advance of conveying Assets, the FDIC requires contract services to perform title servicing. Depending on the circumstances, the FDIC may acquire title insurance policies to be issued to purchasers of FDIC real property assets. The FDIC obtains title to Owned Real Estate Assets (Assets) throughout the United States and its territories. In addition, the FDIC, or its designee, manages, markets, and sells discovered real estate assets, as well as real property securing loans and other real property that the FDIC assumes ownership of in the course of performing its duties and mandate. This real property includes residential and commercial properties, vacant lots, undeveloped land, agricultural land, real property within planned unit developments and subdivisions, and other types of real property. ORE Assets are located throughout the United States and its territories (Puerto Rico, Guam, and the U.S. Virgin Islands).

Real Estate Auction and FDIC Property Listing Services

The FDIC manages its ORE in one of two ways: 1.) most ORE are managed and marketed by using ORE management and marketing contractors (e.g. ORE M/M Contractors); and 2.) a small number of properties are self-managed and marketed by the FDIC through its in-house personnel. Historically, the FDIC has found that special marketing initiatives (e.g. auctions, sealed bid sales, structured sales, bulk sales and securitizations) can also be an effective way to sell ORE, even at low asset concentrations. The FDIC has had significant success through the utilization of real estate auctions to evaluate the marketability of property, to develop and implement focused advertising and promotional campaigns, and to execute auction and post-auction marketing strategies.

Resolution Physical Security Services

The FDIC maintains the stability and public confidence in the nation's financial system by: (1) insuring deposits; (2) examining and supervising financial institutions; and (3) managing resolutions and receiverships. When a financial institution (bank) fails, the FDIC is appointed as Receiver of the failed institution. Acting in its receivership capacity, the FDIC takes possession of the premises and all records and arranges for the orderly liquidation of assets held by the failed institution. The failed financial institution may consist of single or multiple locations in one or more jurisdictions within the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, the District of Columbia and U.S. Territories (Guam, Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands).

The financial institution will still be an open bank at the time the Task Order is issued and the need for confidentiality is extreme. Until the institution is actually closed and the FDIC assumes control of the premises, absolutely no information can be released regarding the nature of the location assignment. Once closed, a physical security presence will be maintained at all locations identified for the failed institution until the FDIC has completed the closing resolution functions. Off-Duty Active Law Enforcement Officers assignments are generally less than seven (7) days in duration for a closing. This duration is typically shorter for a branch location as compared to main location and operation centers.

Temporary Staffing Services

Following the failure of a financial institution, the immediate objective of the FDIC, as receiver, is to inventory and balance the books of the failed institution. The former employees of the closed institution, with their specific knowledge of the institution's business and customers, are essential to meeting this objective. Typically, the former employees of the institution are available for immediate hiring by a temporary staffing contractor. The contractor, in turn, can provide FDIC with experienced temporary resources to support its resolution activities.

Translation/Transcreation/Interpretation Services

FDIC requires the use of translation services and transcreation services for documents acquired from failed or failing financial institutions as well as interpretation services on a periodic basis when a failing bank has a customer base that transacts business in a foreign language. Throughout the period of performance services may be provided at the contractor's offices, a failed institution or any other FDIC controlled location necessary to support FDIC's efforts.
