Cycle For U.S. Branches and Agencies of Foreign Banks AGENCIES: Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Treasury; Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. ACTION: Joint final rule.

SUMMARY: The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (Board), and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) (collectively, the Agencies) are adopting as a joint final rule their joint interim rule implementing section 2214 of the Economic Growth and Regulatory Paperwork Reduction Act of 1996 (EGRPRA). Section 2214 of EGRPRA authorizes the Agencies to extend the examination cycle for certain United States branches and agencies of foreign banks. This joint final rule makes United States branches and agencies of foreign banks with total assets of $250 million or less eligible for an 18-month examination cycle if they meet certain qualifying criteria. EFFECTIVE DATE: October 22, 1999. FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: OCC: Martha Clarke, Senior Attorney, International Activities (202/874-0680); Jose Tuya, Director, International Banking & Finance (202/874-4730); or Karl Betz, Attorney, Legislative and Regulatory Activities (202/874-5090), Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, 250 E Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20219. Stoloff, Counsel, Legal Division (202/452-3269), Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, 20th Street and Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, D.C. 20551. FDIC: Karen Walter, Chief, International Branch, Division of Supervision (202/898-3540); or Mark Mellon, Counsel, Regulation and Legislation Section, Legal Division (202/898-3854), Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, 550 17th Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20429. SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Background The International Banking Act of 1978 (the IBA),¹ as amended by the Foreign Bank Supervision Enhancement Act of 1991,² prescribed a 12-month examination schedule for U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks. Section 2214 of EGRPRA modified that requirement by amending section 3105(c)(1)(C) of the IBA to provide that U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks are subject to on-site examination as frequently as national banks and state banks are examined by their appropriate federal banking agencies.³

In general, national banks and state banks must be examined every 12 months. However, section 111 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991⁴ authorized an 18-month examination cycle for certain national banks and state banks with a composite rating of 1 under the Uniform Financial Institutions Rating System (UFIRS) and total assets of $100 million or less. Subsequently, section 306 of the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994⁵ expanded the availability of the 18-month examination cycle to certain national banks and state banks with a composite rating of 1 under UFIRS and total assets of less than $250 million, as well as to certain national banks and state banks with a composite rating of 2 under UFIRS and total assets of $100 million or less. Finally, section 2221 of EGRPRA amended section 10(d) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (FDI Act) ⁶ to provide that at any time after September 23, 1996, U.S. bank supervisory agencies could extend the 18-month examination cycle to certain national banks and state banks with a composite rating of 2 and total assets of $250 million or less. Effective April 2, 1998, [[Page 56950]] the Agencies issued a final rule that extended the examination cycle to 18 months for certain national banks and state banks that satisfy the requirements of section 2221 of EGRPRA. 63 FR 16377 (April 2, 1998). To be eligible for the extended cycle, the national bank or state bank must: ----- \4\ Pub. L. 102-242, 105 Stat. 2236 (section 111 is codified at 12 U.S.C. 1820(d)). \5\ Pub. L. 103-325, 108 Stat. 2160. \6\ Section 10(d) of the FDI Act is codified at 12 U.S.C. 1820(d)(10).

----- (a) Have total assets of $250 million or less; (b) Be rated a composite 2 or better under the UFIRS; (c) Be well capitalized; (d) Be well managed; (e) Not be subject to a formal enforcement action; and (f) Not have experienced a change of control during the preceding 12-month period in which a full-scope, on-site examination would have been required but for section 10(d) of the FDI Act. Interim Rule To implement section 2214 of EGRPRA, the Agencies issued a joint interim rule on August 28, 1998, that similarly extended the examination cycle for certain U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks. 63 FR 46118. Under the joint interim rule, a U.S. branch or agency of a foreign bank may be considered for an 18-month examination cycle if the branch or agency meets certain criteria and if there are no other factors that cause the appropriate federal banking agency to conclude that more frequent examinations of the branch or agency are appropriate. To be eligible for an 18-month examination cycle, the U.S. branch or agency of a foreign bank must: (a) Have total assets of $250 million or less; (b) Have received a composite ROCA ⁷ supervisory rating of 1 or 2 at its most recent examination; ----- \7\

The supervisory rating system for branches and agencies of foreign banks is referred to as ROCA. The four components of ROCA are: risk management, operational controls, compliance, and asset quality. ----- (c) Satisfy the requirements of either paragraph (1) or (2): (1) The foreign bank's most recently reported capital adequacy position consists of, or is equivalent to, Tier 1 and total risk-based capital ratios of at least 6 percent and 10 percent, respectively, on a consolidated basis; or (2) The branch or agency has maintained, on a daily basis over the past three quarters, eligible assets in an amount not less than 108 percent of third party liabilities (determined consistent with applicable federal and state law) and sufficient liquidity is currently available to meet its obligations to third parties; (d) Not be subject to a formal enforcement action or order by the Board, FDIC, or OCC; and (e) Not have experienced a change in control during the preceding 12-month period in which a full-scope, on-site examination would have been required but for section 3105(c)(1)(C) of the IBA. The Agencies noted in the joint interim rule that each Agency retains the authority to examine a U.S. branch or agency of a foreign bank as frequently as the Agency deems necessary. The joint interim rule also provided that, in determining whether a U.S. branch or agency of a foreign bank is eligible for an extended examination cycle, the Agencies may consider additional factors, including whether: (a) Any of the individual components of the ROCA rating of the U.S. branch or agency is rated 3 or worse; (b) The results of any off-site supervision indicate a deterioration in the condition of the U.S. branch or agency; (c) The size, relative importance, and role of a particular U.S. branch or agency when reviewed in the context of the foreign bank's entire U.S. operations otherwise necessitate an annual examination (including, for example, whether the office generates a significant level of assets that are booked elsewhere); and (d) The condition of the foreign bank itself gives rise to a need to examine the U.S. branch or agency every 12 months. The Agencies noted further that they generally will determine whether to apply the 18-month examination cycle to a particular U.S. branch or agency based on the overall risk assessment for that office, as well as the factors noted in the joint interim rule. Since U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks do not receive separate examination ratings of their management, the Agencies stated in the joint interim rule that they will use certain criteria as a proxy for the well managed criterion applicable to U.S. banks, including the ROCA component and composite ratings, the existence of any formal enforcement action or order issued by an Agency, and the other discretionary standards described in the preceding paragraph. The joint interim rule became effective immediately, but the Agencies invited public comment on any aspect of the joint interim rule. As discussed in the following paragraphs, the commenters strongly favored adopting the expanded examination cycle as set forth in the joint interim rule. Comments Received In response to their request for comment on the joint interim rule, the Agencies received a total of seven comments, including six from banks and one from a trade association. The commenters strongly supported the expanded examination cycle for U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks. They agreed that the expanded examination cycle would reduce regulatory burden on smaller, well-run branches and agencies that do not pose significant supervisory concerns. One commenter, while expressing support for the rule, requested that the Agencies clarify four points. First, the commenter sought clarification that the two tests for determining whether a branch or agency is well capitalized are alternative tests and that use of one test for one examination cycle does not preclude use of the other test in subsequent exam cycles. The commenter is correct. The criterion based on capital states that the U.S. branch or agency must satisfy the requirements of either test. Reliance on one of the eligibility tests for an extended examination cycle does not preclude subsequent reliance on the other test. The two capital adequacy tests contained in this rule are limited in their applicability to determining whether a branch or agency is eligible for an extended examination cycle. These two capital adequacy tests have no effect on special asset maintenance requirements. Second, the commenter also requested guidance as to how the "well capitalized" criterion will be implemented. Capital adequacy will be determined using regulatory and supervisory reports, and public information where appropriate. The foreign bank's capital adequacy may be assessed on the basis of the home country supervisor's capital standards if those standards are in all respects consistent with the Basel Accord. Third, the commenter requested that the Agencies clarify whether both eligible assets and average third party liabilities are to be determined consistent with applicable federal and state law. The commenter noted that the wording of the alternative capital test using eligible assets in the interim rule suggested that average third party liabilities were not to be determined in accordance with applicable federal and state law. The Agencies have amended that provision in the final rule to clarify that both eligible assets and average third party liabilities are to be determined consistent with applicable federal and state law. [[Page 56951]] Finally, the commenter asked how the Agencies would determine the sufficiency of a branch's or agency's liquidity under the alternative capital test. The alternative capital test measures eligible assets against average third party liabilities over the past three quarters. The requirement that sufficient liquidity is available to meet obligations to third parties is designed to ensure that the branch or agency is able to meet unexpected demands in the event of a sudden economic downturn or other adverse events affecting the foreign bank or its U.S. offices subsequent to the last quarter measured under the alternative capital test. Accordingly, determinations regarding the sufficiency of a branch's or agency's liquidity need to be made on a case-by-case basis. Final Rule In light of the comments received, the Agencies are adopting the joint interim rule as a joint final rule with the clarifications discussed above. Under the joint final rule, in order to be eligible for the extended examination cycle, a U.S. branch or agency of a foreign bank must: (a) Have total assets of $250 million or less; (b) Have a composite ROCA supervisory rating of 1 or 2 at its most recent examination; (c) Meet either of the "well capitalized" criteria noted above; (d) Not be subject to a formal enforcement action or order by the Board, FDIC, or OCC; and (e) Not have undergone a change in control during the preceding 12- month period in which a full-scope, on-site examination would have been required but for section 3105(c)(1)(C) of the IBA. For purposes of this rule, a branch or agency of a foreign bank will be deemed to have undergone a change in control if it is sold to another foreign bank or if there has been a change in control of the foreign bank. The Agencies may consider other factors in determining whether a U.S. branch or agency that meets the foregoing criteria should not be eligible for an extended examination cycle. These discretionary factors include whether: (a) Any of the individual components of the ROCA rating of the U.S. office is rated 3 or worse; (b) The results of any off-site supervision indicate a deterioration in the condition of the office; (c) The size, relative importance, and role of a particular office when reviewed in the context of the foreign bank's entire U.S. operations otherwise necessitates an annual examination (including, for example, whether the office generates a significant level of assets that are booked elsewhere); and (d) The condition of the foreign bank itself gives rise to such a need. The Agencies will base their determination whether to apply the 18- month examination cycle to a particular U.S. branch or agency on the overall risk assessment for that office. Each Agency retains the authority to examine a branch or agency within its jurisdiction as frequently as the Agency deems necessary. Thus, for instance, the appropriate Agency may determine that changes in the level or direction of risk in a branch or agency or in the level of third party liabilities may warrant examining the branch or agency before the expiration of an 18-month exam cycle. The Agencies believe that an extended examination cycle for eligible U.S. offices of foreign banks is consistent with principles of safety and soundness because it will permit the Agencies to focus their resources on those offices that present the most immediate supervisory concerns while concomitantly reducing the regulatory burden on smaller offices that do not pose a similar level of concern. The Agencies will continue to use off-site supervision techniques, including the submission of regulatory reports, to monitor the condition and any changes in the risk profile of offices scheduled to be examined on the extended 18-month examination cycle.

Immediate Effective Date The Agencies find good cause for dispensing with the 30-day delayed effective date prescribed by the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), 5 U.S.C. 551 et seq. The expanded examination cycle was effective upon publication of the joint interim rule in August 1998. This joint final rule adopts the interim rule with minor changes. While the Agencies invited interested parties to comment on the rule at that time, each Agency already has implemented the expanded examination cycle. Accordingly, depository institutions will not require any additional time to adjust their policies or practices in order to comply with the joint final rule.

Regulatory Flexibility Act A regulatory flexibility analysis under the Regulatory Flexibility Act is only required when an agency is required to publish a general notice of proposed rulemaking for any proposed rule. 5 U.S.C. 603. As noted previously, the Agencies have determined that it was not necessary to publish a notice of proposed rulemaking for this joint final rule. Accordingly, a regulatory flexibility analysis is not required.

Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act Title II of the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act of 1996 (SBREFA) ⁸ provides generally for agencies to report rules to Congress and the General Accounting Office (GAO) for review. The reporting requirement is triggered when a Federal Agency issues a final rule. The Agencies filed the appropriate reports with Congress and the GAO as required by SBREFA. The Office of Management and Budget has determined that the joint final rule does not constitute a "major rule" as defined by SBREFA. ----- \8\

Pub. L. 104-121. ----- Paperwork Reduction Act

In accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (44 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.), the Agencies have determined that no collections of information pursuant to the Paperwork Reduction Act are contained in this joint final rule. OCC Executive Order 12866 Statement The OCC has determined that this final rule is not a significant regulatory action under Executive Order 12866. OCC Unfunded Mandates Act of 1995 Statement Section 202 of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995, Pub. L. 104-4, 109 Stat. 48 (March 22, 1995) (Unfunded Mandates Act), requires that an agency prepare a budgetary impact statement before promulgating a rule that includes a Federal mandate that may result in the expenditure by state, local, and tribal governments, in the aggregate, or by the private sector, of $100 million or more in any one year. If a budgetary impact statement is required, section 205 of the Unfunded Mandates Act also requires an agency to identify and consider a reasonable number of regulatory alternatives before promulgating a rule. Because the OCC has determined that this joint final rule will not result in expenditures by state, local, and tribal governments, in the aggregate, or by the private sector, of $100 million or more in any one year, the OCC has not prepared a budgetary impact statement or specifically addressed the regulatory alternatives considered. As discussed in the preamble, this joint final rule will have the effect of reducing regulatory burden on certain national banks. [[Page 56952]]

Section 347.214 is revised to read as follows: Sec. 347.214 Examination of branches of foreign banks. (a) Frequency of on-site examination. Each branch or agency of a foreign bank shall be examined on-site at least once during each 12- month period (beginning on the date the most recent examination of the office ended) by: (1) The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (Board); (2) The FDIC, if an insured branch; (3) The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), if the branch or agency of the foreign bank is licensed by the Comptroller; or (4) The state supervisor, if the office of the foreign bank is licensed or chartered by the state. (b) 18-month cycle for certain small institutions. (1) Mandatory standards. The FDIC may conduct a full-scope, on-site examination at least once during each 18-month period, rather than each 12-month period as provided in paragraph (a) of this section, if the insured branch: (i) Has total assets of $250 million or less; (ii) Has received a composite ROCA supervisory rating (which rates risk management, operational controls, compliance, and asset quality) of 1 or 2 at its most recent examination; (iii) Satisfies the requirement of either the following paragraph (b)(iii)(A) or (B): (A) The foreign bank's most recently reported capital adequacy position consists of, or is equivalent to, Tier 1 and total risk-based capital ratios of at least 6 percent and 10 percent, respectively, on a consolidated basis; or [[Page 56953]] (B) The insured branch has maintained on a daily basis, over the past three quarters, eligible assets in an amount not less than 108 percent of the preceding quarter's average third party liabilities (determined consistent with applicable federal and state law) and sufficient liquidity is currently available to meet its obligations to third parties; (iv) Is not subject to a formal enforcement action or order by the Board, FDIC, or the OCC; and (v) Has not experienced a change in control during the preceding 12-month period in which a full-scope, on-site examination would have been required but for this section. (2) Discretionary standards. In determining whether an insured branch that meets the standards of paragraph (b)(1) of this section should not be eligible for an 18-month examination cycle pursuant to this paragraph (b), the FDIC may consider additional factors, including whether: (i) Any of the individual components of the ROCA supervisory rating of an insured branch is rated ``3" or worse; (ii) The results of any off-site monitoring indicate a deterioration in the condition of the insured branch; (iii) The size, relative importance, and role of a particular insured branch when reviewed in the context of the foreign bank's entire U.S. operations otherwise necessitate an annual examination; and (iv) The condition of the parent foreign bank gives rise to such a need. (c) Authority to conduct more frequent examinations. Nothing in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section limits the authority of the FDIC to examine any insured branch as frequently as it deems necessary. By order of the Board of Directors.
